Silliker Australia employee receives AIFST accolade

Blackburn, 12th August, 2010

Giuliano (Joolz) Panetta receives Prize of Excellence AIFST award in recognition of high achievements during final year of study in food science and technology.

The Prize of Excellence is awarded to the top final year students in food science and technology at tertiary institutes with a degree course in food science and technology or related courses. Award candidates are selected on the recommendation of an appropriate, designated senior staff member of the department within the institution. Student's attitude and demonstrated commitment are all characteristics that may be taken into account when determining the recipient of the award. The winner receives the prize of excellence certificate and a one year free membership to the Australian Institute of Food Science and Technology. The award was presented to Joolz from Silliker Australia at the welcome reception of the 2010 43rd AIFST annual convention during July.

This latest award joins a growing list of other accolades received by Joolz. Joolz was also awarded the Gelita Australia award for 'outstanding achievement' during his final year of studies during 2009. The award was based on a plan and manage food and product related concept development project. Joolz developed a gluten free donut pre mix which was deemed to be a very popular food product concept.

Prior to joining Silliker Australia, Joolz worked in fine dining restaurant industry for 6 years as a qualified chef. Joolz now works as a Technical Services Consultant for Silliker Australia, Technical Services department in Blackburn Victoria.
